Local Elites in the Region of Polog in the Light of the Bogorodica Htětovska Charters

Vratislav Zervan (Vienna, Austria)

One of the aims within the project “Byzantino-Serbian Border Zones in Transition: Migration and Elite Change in pre-Ottoman Macedonia (1282–1355)” is to analyse the change of the elite in the border zones after the conquest of the Byzantine Macedonia by the Serbian kingdom.¹ In order to research the dynamics of the circulation process thoroughly we have to focus on the micro-level and use prosopographical methods.² DPP offers important digital tools for the visualisation of the traces of power, which have been preserved.

The region of Polog in the North-West part of FYROM³ is a paradigmatic example of the border zone, about which we know very little from the narrative sources.⁴ In the year 1282, after the expansion of the Serbian King Stefan Uroš II Milutin, the territory of Polog was annexed by the Serbian kingdom.⁵ No narrative source describes, how the occupation took place. There are no reports about

Our team is indebted to the aforesaid Institute as well as to the FWF – Austrian Science Fund for their support.

² The local elite appears in most cases only in the sources written in the Serbian recension of Old church Slavonic and was only in exceptions used by the “Prosopographisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit” (hereafter PLP). Therefore, we plan to publish addenda for the region of Northern Macedonia, that will also cover these desiderata.

³ On 25 January 2019, the Greek Parliament ratified the Prespa agreement and enabled FYROM to change the name of the country into Republic of North Macedonia.

the persons, who profited from the conquest. We do not know, if the Byzantine administration was left in place and what consequences had an increased Serbian influence on power. Danilo only laconically states, that Milutin conquered Polog with all towns and the land. We gain at least a partial insight into the socio-economic conditions of the region, if we draw attention to the charters complex of the Serbian kings. The charters do not only represent confirmations of rights to existing monasteries by donations, but also new foundations.⁶

In this regard, the charters issued the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, which was later the largest landowner in Polog, are outstanding. Demetrios Chomatenos provides the oldest evidence on the functioning of the monastery. One of the charters from the collection of his judicial decisions, which reflects the situation from the years 1217–1219 after the conquest of Polog by Theodore I Komnenos Doukas, the ruler of Epiros and Thessaly, mentions Gerasimos, who was a monk from the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo.⁷ Although no document of Milutin destined for the monastery has been preserved, the statements of the later charters rather confirm than deny its existence.⁸ The monastery gained a higher status over the years. This is shown by the fact, that about 1317 the monastery was on the tenth place in the hierarchical rank of the most important monasteries of the Serbian church.⁹ However, after twenty years, the monastery was already in a state of dilapidation, without a donator and its fortification had to be renovated. What was even worse, the places, which belonged to the monastery according to the older charters of the Byzantine and

Serbian rulers, were not in its possession anymore and had to be bestowed again.¹⁰

Two charters from the reign of Stefan Uroš IV Dušan are a unique source of information concerning the local elite in Polog.

It is the chrysobull charter of the Serbian King Stefan Dušan for the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo¹¹ and the Land Inventory of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, also known as Vrěviō.¹² Both sources are unfortunately not dated. On the basis of the analysis by Dušan Korać it can be established, that the Serbian King Stefan Dušan issued together with his son Uroš, the Young King, the chrysobull charter for the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo in the summer of the year 1343.¹³

Vrěviō is in its essence an inventory of landed estates in the possession of the monastery. It is, however, also a collection of a large number of lost documents from different times. There is a wide variety of documents in it. Sale contracts and donations prevail, but it contains also various written records of other legal notes. It is an indisputable fact, that the documents in Vrěviō come from various times. It is attested by the presence of up to four different abbots (Nikodim, Theōktist, Isaije and Vlaho or bishop of Vlachs) of the monastery in the text. The possibility, that the Bishop Ignatius held also the office of an abbot, should not be excluded. Furthermore, another abbot, called Arsenije, appears in the chrysobull charter. On the basis of the paleographic analysis, it is clear, that the script and the technique of writing shows features typical for the mid-14th century.¹⁴ Besides that, the chrysobull charter and the Vrěviō contain several almost identical text passages. It seems likely, that the Vrěviō could have served as a basis for the chrysobull charter. This hypothesis is confirmed by the formulation in the chrysobull charter concerning the donation of the fourth part of the village Sedlarevo.¹⁵ This assumption is underpinned also by Đorđe Bubalo, who proposed to date the Vrěviō between the November of 1342 and the summer of 1343. He seeks support in the mention about the bishop Vlaho, in which he rather sees the Metropolitan of the Vlachs. According to him, he was ordained as a bishop not before autumn of the year 1342. It is highly probable, that Stefan Dušan seized at this time the town of Chlerenon (Florina), which undoubtedly was one of the centres of this bishopric.¹⁶

The material, which I have collected from both charters, forms the core of the work. I gathered here information about nearly 170 individuals based on criteria similar to the PLP. I assembled the data in a sort of a preliminary work list for further prosopographical analysis.¹⁷

The only individual excluded from the list is the Serbian king, because there is not enough evidence to pinpoint the exact ruler, although the text concerning two donations in Vrěviō closely resembles the formulation in the chrysobull charter.¹⁸

The abbots (Nikodim, Theōktist, Isaije, bishop Ignatije) and the ikonoms (Mathei, Neōfit), which were responsible for managing the property, incomes and expenditure, played an important role in the life of the monastery. It derives from Vrěviō, that in the purchase of the estates not only *ikonomi*s were involved, but also abbots contributed a significant sum of money. The largest amount of the soil for the monastery was obtained by Bishop Ignatij. Vlaho or the bishop of Vlachs in turn strongly advocated the rights of the monastery concerning the land, which was fraudulently acquired by Progon.

The data from the Vrěviō seems to confirm the fact, that the Byzantine state structures remained preserved. Administrative positions, however, were apparently assumed by the persons loyal to the Serbian ruler. The donation of a certain Isaha was confirmed by Vladoje, the headman (kefalija) of the Polog district, who was one of the highest representatives of the ruler in the region.¹⁹

The Vrěviō contains also the so-called Nomic charter.²⁰ This document refers to four individuals (Manoilo 3, Pasarel, Runzer and Sevlad), who used the honorary title sevast, a loanword from the Greek σεβαστός. Only significant local officials and members of local aristocracy could receive the title, which is proved also by the Nomic charter, because the expression vlastele and boljare (both terms for nobility) is also used to designate them.²¹ Beside Pasarel, who was summoned by Georgi, Bishop of Prizren, with others to tell the truth concerning the disputed land located on the hill called Pleš, all appear in the source as witnesses. Their names show us, how motley the society in Polog was. While the name Manoilo may be in some way linked to the Byzantine aristocracy, Sevlad was certainly a member of the emerging elite appointed by the Serbian ruler.

²⁰ Named after the notary (nomik) Nikola 3, who made a record of a lawsuit between the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo and the nobleman Progon and who wrote down the judgement of Geōrgii, Bishop of Prizren, in whose jurisdiction the disputed land was situated.

Seliščev, Polog i ego bolgarskoe naselenie. Istoricheskie, etnograficheskie i dialektologicheskie očerki severo-zapadnoj Makedonii (Sofija 1929) 96–97.

The names Pasarel and Runzer derive from the Romance languages and their bearers probably belonged to the Latin aristocracy.²² The peculiarity is, that Manoil 3, Runzer and Sevlad were all related. Manoil was the brother-in-law of Sevlad and the father-in-law of Runzer.

Another indication, which may point to the presence of Byzantine elites in Polog, is the use of the honorary title kyr from the Greek κύρος in the case of men or kyra from the Greek κυρία in the case of women. We find the expression as epithet describing nine men (Aleksa, Andronik, Kalinik, Manoil 2, Manoil 3, Mihal, Nikifor, Pardo Theōdor, Theodor Sulima) and one woman (Zoja).²³ The bearers of the title use almost exclusively Greek names. Two of them (Kalinik and Manoil 2) are connected with a place, which was probably their residence.

Baptismal names and surnames often suggest more about the identity of the bearer. Dmitr Čalapija, who by the grace of the Serbian king obtained authority over the village of Mel, had a Greek baptismal name and a surname, which clearly refers to the Ottoman expression čelebi (nobleman), known in the Greek language as well due to the proper names and a loanword.²⁴

The Vrëviō is also a source of information on the Serbian or Slavic terms of law and judiciary, which undoubtedly became generally accepted in the region of Polog.

The only mentioned representative of the judicial power has a Slavic name. Judge (sudija) Dabiživ made a decision on the disputed land in the possession of the monastery. On the basis of only one hint, it cannot be determined, whether he worked on a court of final appeal in Polog or belonged to the judges of the lower rank.²⁵

Among the witnesses in the judicial decision about the former estate of Strězo the čelnik Andronik appears. The bearer of the title with a typical Greek name, held the office, which had a wide range of competences in the 14th century. This dignitary was active on various levels of the state administration.²⁶ Andronik appears as a witness in the company of the smith Stanc. Therefore, it can be assumed, that he was rather a leader in the village administration or he worked as a headman in the service of the local nobleman.²⁷

In the Vrěviō the so-called field of knez is mentioned twice.²⁸ As in the case of čelnik, it is hard to believe, that the field belonged to a high-ranked official.²⁹ The field was rather in the possession of a knez, who was in charge of the local village administration, similar to the position of knez known from the Dušan's code and from the register of the property of the Church of Saint Stephen in the village of Konče.³⁰

The identification of the local nobility in both sources is an even more challenging task. The so-called concept of the "Signs of Power", which was developed by the team of DPP, provides a helpful tool and enables us to make a brighter selection of these actors.³¹ The most significant representatives of the group are Isaha, Pribac and Varnava. Isah and Pribac have a common denominator, which is the term dvor, respectively dvorani.³² The expression evokes a residence of a nobleman, but was rather a smaller economic unit, which could correspond to the Byzantine term στάσις. The householders, which were in charge of this place, are often mentioned as dvorani.³³ According to the Vrěviō and the chrysobull charter a certain Varnava donated the seventh part of the village of Hvališe to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. This part formed apparently an economic unit together with the field Monohorav.³⁴

The expression zemlja occurs in the Vrěviō only once in connection with the sale and donation of the former Strězo's estate to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, which was challenged by his son and his son-in-law in court.³⁵ The term corresponds to the Greek word γῆ, which was only rarely in the possession of the ordinary peasant.³⁶

It is clear, that the local aristocracy almost never farmed on their own estates. They hired for this work people, who had often more rights and favourable duties than the ordinary peasant. The elder Pribislav appears in the Vrěviō according to the hypothesis of Đorđe Bubalo as a man of Markuš, which means, that he depended upon him. The privileged position of Markuš is proven by the fact, that he, together with Georgi, the Bishop of Prizren, gathered the local noblemen and people and requested them to tell the truth concerning the disputed land located on the hill called Pleš.³⁷

The testimony of the wealthiest, the most respected and the oldest inhabitants of the villages, or even of the entire region, gave the court decision more weight.³⁸ The Vrěviō records 27 witnesses. In the case of four of them (Janic, Kalinik, Kalojan 2 and Theodor). The Vrěviō mentions even the place, where they resided. The compilers of transcripts in the Vrěviō did not go beyond the horizon of the typical local memory, which ideally records the events and persons from the time of the grandparents. Only Polelēj, Krasev, Sulima or Kraimir may have lived during the reign of King Milutin.

In two documents, which are transcribed in the Vrěviō, is a penal clause. The threat of a sanction for the person, which did not respect the decision, was identical: 500 perper.³⁹ Lidija Slaveva considers the penalty rather as a transcript from the chancery formulary at the time of Milutin's reign. The high amount of money, however, could indicate also an immense value of the estate and actors (Progon, Theōdora and Jelena), which were part of the local elite.⁴⁰

As I have mentioned before, the bulk of the Vrěviō contains brief transcripts of donations (table 1) and sale transactions (table 2) of fields (niva), meadows (livada) and plots (*komat*⁴¹) of vineyards and fields. Although both groups of documents provide often details about the price (table 3) and area of the estate (table 4), we do not learn much about the owner.

A donation for the salvation of the soul of the donor or his relatives prevails (za dušu) with 30 examples, often a donation for the right to have a grave (za grob) is attested with 15 examples, occasionally accompanied by the mention of a remembrance (pomen) or tonsure (postrig). Only in the case of five donators (Branilo, Dminko, Dmitr, Kyr Manoilo 2 and Rob) their place of residence is mentioned. Three of them lived in the village of Želino. Dminko from Mel bestowed a field to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, which had an area of 30 d nin.⁴² This measure of the area appears in the Vrěviō only three times.⁴³ The estate of Dminko was the most extensive, but we cannot assign him to the local elite on the basis of this argument, if we take into account, that he may have lived at the same time as Dmitr of Čalapija, who was in charge of the village of Mel.⁴⁴

The entries of the Vrěviō concerning the sale transactions supply us with even more curtailed data. The only individual with a specification about the place of residence is Mišat. He came from Mel, where he sold two plots of land to the ikonom of the monastery for 12 perper.⁴⁵ In this case the same can be applied to Dminko. The price and the area of estate are the only data, which we can rely on. Bishop Ignatij payed the highest price for the estate of Pardo Kosta. He bought the meadow for a horse and 30 perper.⁴⁶ The cost of a horse varied from time to time and according to region, but it could reach the price of 30 perper.⁴⁷ The second highest amount of money was offered to Grozděj and Kalojan. The monastery bought their 30 zamet large estate for 28 perper.⁴⁸ If we take into account, that zamet was probably a synonym for other units of land, which appear in the Vrěviō, all units were worth between 0.9 and 1 perper.⁴⁹

The other transactions show us, that the amount of money available for the acquisition of land was very small. The monastery purchased arable land for horses, mare, ox, swine, ram and other animal products.⁵⁰ The abbot Isaije bought even an estate for two tbl of rye, a měh of whey and a polutk of bacon. The transcript in the Vrěviō mentions the reason, why the sellers agreed with this disadvantageous transaction. They sold an abandoned estate of their father, who may have lived at the time of Milutin's reign, during a hunger period.⁵¹

R: His brother was the Bishop Vlaho.

L: According to the so-called Nomic charter, preserved in the Vrěviō, he was among the local noblemen (vlastele) and people (hora) gathered at the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo on 4th November of an unspecified year. He was asked together with others by the Bishop of Prizren, Geōrgii, and Markuš, to swear to tell the truth concerning the disputed land located on the hill called Pleš. He have the testimony that at the time, when he was a child and his brother was the Archimandrite of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, the hill Pleš was not in Progon's possession.

N: According to the Vrěviō the hill called Pleš was situated very close to Htětovo. Pleš is nowadays not preserved in the toponymy.

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

R: He was the father-in-law of Pardo 1.

L: He donated a field between two Mogilicas for the sake of salvation to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. His land lay in the vicinity of the end of the furrow and ran from the willow tree to the road called after the village of Lěška and to the river.

N: Since the topographical entity Mogilica is mentioned as a boundary mark of the village Štenče in the chrysobull charter for the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, it should be sought close-by of it. The exact location of the abandoned village Lěška is not known. The farmland of the village is to be found in the area of the villages Mlačice, Htětovo, Hvališe, Želino, Krušica, Nikiforovec and Mogilica. It lay near Htětovska Reka and the emperor's road (carev put).

Radoslav M. Grujić states that he became bishop of Prizren after the conquest of Polog in 1282. Đorđe Bubalo argues that he was ordained bishop of Prizren after 1333 and before 1342. Janković suggests that he held his office until 1346.L: He and Markuš requested the gathered local noblemen (vlastele) and people (hora) at the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo on 4th november of an unspecified year to swear to tell the truth concerning the disputed land located on the hill called Pleš. After the testimonies of witnesses confirmed the church's possession of the hill Pleš, Geōrgi gave a speech to the present noblemen, where he declared himself as a real master of the local church estate.N: According to the Vrěviō the hill called Pleš was situated very close to Htětovo. D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.R: His sister-in-law was Radoslava. He had relatives.L: He sold a field in Nikiforovec above Srđorék for a horse to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. At the time, when Nikodim was Abbot of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, Gjuro, together with his sister-in-law Radoslava, sold one half of a field to the monastery. The second half was purchased from their relatives. The monastery payed for the entire field 27 perper. The land was situated on the left side of the emperor's road and reached the domain of Stržo and the road called after the village of Lěška. He, together with Radun and the sons of Polelěj, sold a field above a furrow on the right side of the emperor's road, which was reaching the road called after the village of Lěška near Jablance, to the Bishop Ignatije for the horse of Budimir.

N: The village of Nikiforovec is no longer existent today. It was located near the deserted village of Krpeno. The topographical entity Srđorěk is probably identical with Sadarek/Sedarek near Želino, which survived as a field name. The exact location of the abandoned village Lěška is not known. Ignatije

M: Ignatije.

O: In Vrđivo mentioned only as bishop. The charter for the monastery in Gračanica does not give a strong support for the identification of Ignatije with his namesake, who was Bishop of Lipljan. Ignatije held probably the abbot's office of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo before his career as bishop.

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

L: He purchased a field above a furrow on the right side of the emperor's road, which was reaching the road called after the village of Lěška near Jablance, from Gjuro, Radun and the sons of Polelěj for the horse of Budimir. A certain An'drijan, son-in-law of Pardo, sold the rest of the field called Zlovadnica above Trěboš to Bishop Ignatije for a mare and 2 perper. The field bordered on the old furrow and on the road called after the village Poroj. Bishop Ignatije bought the field called Ilovica under Drěnovec and under a road from Pardo Kosta for 18 perper. He acquired a meadow under Velgoš and under a road from Pardo Kosta for a horse and 30 perper. He obtained a 25 zamet field in Zlovadnica under the church's field, which was reaching the boundary of Drman, inexpensively from Manoil(o) Globica and Globica's brother. A certain Gōn, with his wife Theōdora 2, sold the field called Gumnište to Ignatije for 8 perper and 9 run of wool. Ignatije bought also the rest of a field in Nikiforovec near the church's field, which belonged to Theōdora 3 and her daughter Jelena, for 10 perper. The bishop was also responsible for the written record of this sale transaction. The act was signed in the presence of the witnesses Kalojan 2 from Lěška and the two sons of Radoslav Drobnjak, Argir and Hran.

N: The village of Jablance does not exist any more and its position is unknown. The only thing, which is certain from the Vrēviō, is the proximity to the road called after the village of Lěška and the emperor's road. The exact location of the abandoned village Lěška is not known. The farmland of the village is to be found in the area of the villages Mlačice, Htětovo, Hvališe, Želino, Krušica, Nikiforovec and Mogilica. It lay near Htětovska Reka and the emperor's road (carev put). The village Trěboš (now Treboš) is 5 km E and Poroj 3 km NE from Tetovo away. The field names Drenovec and Drunavec between Tetovo and Poroj could be interpreted as traces of the deserted village. The village of Velgošt does not exist anymore. It is to be sought between Trěboš, Drěnovec and Želino. Zlovadnica is with all probability identical with the field called Zlovadnica above Trěboš. The village of Nikiforovec is no longer existent today. It was located near the deserted village of Krpe-no.

Isaha

Исаха

M: Isaha.

O: Monk.

D: Probably died before summer 1343.

R: His wife was Isašina.

L: He donated his court in Sedlarevo with meadows, oak forest, mill, pasture and all boundaries and rights to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. This endowment was confirmed by the Kefalija of Polog Vladoje. According to the Bogorodica Htětovska charter he and his wife granted one fourth of the village Sedlarevo with all boundaries, rights, mills, meadows and an enclosure to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo for tonsure.

N: The information from the Vrěviō and the chrysobull charter regarding the village of Sedlarevo are very sparse and offer therefore several options for localisation. Marija Koprivica proposes today's Sedlarce near the Suva Gora mountain range. Several researchers claim that Sedlarevo is identical with Gorno Sedlarce or Dolno Sedlarce. Miodrag Al. Purković argues for Sedlarevo near Tetovo.

Isaije

Исаје

M: Isaije.

O: Abbot (Igumen) of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo.

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

L: He bought the field called Kraimirovo selište in Carev Studenc from the daughters of Kraimir, Kjura and Jera and from their children Vitomir, Lei, Mil and Roman during starvation for two tbl of rye, a měh of whey and a polutk of bacon. This was attested by Strězo, Vlad, Lěto, Kosta, a certain priest, the son-in-law of Ljuij, and Janic from Velgošt.

N: The toponym Carev Studenc is nowadays unknown. The appearance of Carev Studenc in the Vrěviō indicates that it should be sought between Lešok, Banic and Velgošt.

Isašina

Исашина

(καλογεριτζογ Ισασινογ)

M: Isašina.

O: nun.

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

R: Her husband was Isaha.

L: According to the Bogorodica Htětovska charter she and Isaha granted one fourth of the village Sedlarevo with all boundaries, rights, mills, meadows and an enclosure to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo for tonsure. The monastery was in turn obliged to took care of her until her death.

Jelena

Јелена

(ογ υπερε ιεν Ιελενε)

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

R: Her mother was Theōdora 3.

L: She, together with her mother Theōdora, sold a field in Nikiforovec near the church's field to the Abbot of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo for 10 perper. The rest of their field was purchased by the bishop Ignatije. The bishop was also responsible for the written record. KalimanКалиман

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

R: He was the grandson of Sulim(a).

L: He donated a field near the willow of Progon to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo for the right to bury Trošan. His land ran from the field of Gbelonin to the field of Sopotnik. He sold a field above Dubrava beyond the field of priest Dragan to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. The administration of the monastery did not pay the arranged amount of money. Thereupon he declared not to demand the rest of the money.

N: Dubrava survived as a field name and lies 1.5 km W from Fališe away.

KalinikКалинікъ, Калиникъ

E: Kyr.

D: Before summer 1343, maybe even later.

L: He lived in Modriče. According to the so-called Nomic charter, preserved in the Vrěviō, he was among the local noblemen (vlastele) and people (hora) gathered at the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo on 4th November of an unspecified year. He was asked together with others by the Bishop of Prizren, Geōrgi, and Markuš, to swear to tell the truth concerning the disputed land located on the hill called Pleš. He acted also as a witness after the decision was made, that the property on the hill Pleš belongs to the church.

N: Tomo Tomoski, Lidija Slaveva, Vassiliiki Kravari and Boban Petrovski believe that Modriče is identical with todays Pirok. According to the Vrěviō the hill called Pleš was situated very close to Htětovo. Pleš is nowadays not preserved in the toponymy.

L: He, together with his brother-in-law Theōdor 1, donated one half and sold other half of a field under the road called after the village of Lěška and under the irrigation canal called after the village of Hvališe to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. He, together with his family, brother-in-law Theōdor 1 and the husband of his sister, Rob, sold a field under the field of Alavand in Saždena Vrba to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. The land lay along a furrow between a hawtorn and the road called after the village of Hvališe. The monastery received partly as a donation and bought partly from Pardo a field, which was situated under the road called after the village of Lěška at the place, where the road called after the village in Hvališe and the road called after the village of Lěška met. This land extended to the limits of Hvališe. The purpose of this partly donation was the salvation of the soul of Theōdor 1 and Aleksa. His boundary mark is mentioned in the border delimitation of a field above the village of Trěboš.

N: The exact location of the abandoned village Lěška is not known. The farmland of the village is to be found in the area of the villages Mlačice, Htětovo, Hvališe, Želino, Krušica, Nikiforovec and Mogilica. R: His brother-in-law was Kuman. Identical with 1.

L: He sold, together with his brother-in-law Kuman, Dragija, another brother-in-law of Kuman and Dragoslav, the husband of Kuman's sister, a field in the vicinity of the road called after the village of Lěška and Nikiforovec to Neōfit, the Ikonom of the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, for 8 perper. The purchased land bordered on the church's big field (stlp).

N: The exact location of the abandoned village Lěška is not known. The farmland of the village is to be found in the area of the villages Mlačice, Htětovo, Hvališe, Želino, Krušica, Nikiforovec and Mogilica. It lay near Htětovska Reka and the emperor's road (carev put). The village of Nikiforovec is no longer existent today. It was located near the deserted village of Krpeno.

L: He sold a field with meadows in the middle of the river to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo. His land ran from the ford pass to the pass and to the alder, where two creeks flowed in. The Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo bought from him a 15 dnin field opposite Srđorek. The monastery purchased also his part of the field Monohorav near Krušica, which was reaching to the field of Kjurohna and to Lěšt. He donated a field above Sveta Nedela to the Monastery of the Holy Virgin in Htětovo, because he did not become children yet. His land lay along the road called after Rěčice. It ranged from the road called after Podlug to the furrow called after Podlug and to the boundary mark of Podlug.

N: The topographical entity Srđorěk is probably identical with Sadarek/Sedarek near Želino, which survived as a field name. The village Krušica does not exist anymore. It was apparently located in the area of the deserted village Krušojca/Kruševica, 1.5 km south of the village Dolno Sedlarce. Lěšt should be sought SE of Tetovo in the area between Hvališe and Staro Želynje. Lidija Slaveva believes, that Lešt is identical with nowadays villages Dolna and Gorna Lešnica, located S of Želino. The context of the evidence about Sveta Nedela, we have, points to the area of Rěčice, but the chrysobull charter speaks against it. The metochion with the same name appears in the boundary description of Štenče. Sveta Nedela, NE of Štenče, survived as a field name. The village Rěčice is nowadays Golema and Mala Rečica, approximately 3 km SW of Tetovo away. The exact location of the village of Podlug is unknown. Vassiliki Kravari cautiously advocates the localisation in the vicinity of Rěčice.
